Bethel Christian Academy's The AP's Perspective

A few weeks ago, my mom was here to share at Parent Connect (shameless plug, if you weren't involved in Parent Connect this year, you NEED to be next year!) She helped lead a discussion on parenting using your child's personality type. How many conflicts happen in your house because you and your kids just don't understand each other.

Proverbs 22:6 says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Oftentimes we focus on training our child "in the way he should go" and focus solely on biblical principles and faith. While that is true and so important, we also need to look at our kids and see who they are. We need to see their personalities and their traits; their strengths and their weaknesses and train them up as the person THEY are not the person we are or the person we think they should be. When we understand the differences and idiosyncrasies of our kids, we can help them grow into the purpose God has for them.

My mom and I are complete opposites. She tried to help me become more like her until she realized that I needed to become more like me. When that happened, we started to understand each other and we could communicate and get along because we were operating in who God made us to be. Our kids were created ON purpose and FOR a purpose. Our job isn't to change who they are. Our job is to help them see who God made them to be.

Thanks and God Bless!
